

Happy Birthday, Dad

Dad we have had so many fun times together and I do not want to stop having good times together. I could not stop loving you even if I wanted to but I do not want to stop loving you anyway. We are never, ever going to lose the bond that we have. I love you and mom equally. Sometimes I know that you are pulling my leg and sometimes I think you are telling the truth. When you do that it can get very annoying. I do not know if I can keep you as my father. It would probably take me the rest of my life to figure out everything that we did together. I am going to list some of those things that we did together. Here is the list; making me ride my bike with bad brakes into a garage, playing NBA live 2000 on the computer against me, playing Ricochet Robot and N.Y. Chase, playing Magic the trading card game, helping me with my Karate. That is not close to all the things we did together in almost nine years we have been together. I never thought that I would have such a good time in this world. You educated me so well I am going to give you an A+ on the test of being a good teacher and father. I love you and think you are being the best dad that you can be and along with that you are not just the best dad that you can be but you are the best dad in the entire universe. You could not get any better. Being 55 does not make you a bad father. You are a computer scientist and you have a bachelor's degree, two master's degree's and a Ph.D. I am proud of you and you should be proud of yourself too.
